Modern Chinese history began in 1912 after the last Chinese emperor abdicated the throne and the country became a republic. After 1912, political and military instability was common in China and it was initially fought over by different warlords. Shortly thereafter, two political parties or movements began as a solution to the country's problems.

Geography, Economy, and Modern History of China

Emperor Yingzong of Song ordered Sima Guang and other scholars to begin compiling this universal history of China in 1065, and they presented it to his successor Shenzong in 1084. It contains 294 volumes and about three million characters, and it narrates the history of China from 403 BC to the beginning of the Song dynasty in 959. This style broke the nearly thousand-year tradition of Sima Qian, which employed annals for imperial reigns but biographies or treatises for other topics.

China: Timeline - HISTORY

Modern History of China Prior to 1949, China was a nation of distinct social stratification. For millennia, China had been ruled by Emperors, feudal lords, and an elite class. After the Revolution, however, Communism took over and, until 1979, strict state controls existed over every industry, enterprise, and element of the national economy.
